Infantry Less Popular.

The practice followed by all recruiting officers of allowing the men to choose the organization they join, has lessened the number of eligibles for the Third

Out of the thirteen men whose enlistment blanks were signed by General Harvey yesterday evening, only five chose the infantry, the other eight preferring the artillery.

Many of the officers think all recruits should be assigned to the Third, until that organization is filled to minimum strength, after which the usual method could be followed.

The militiamen are rapidly becoming more efficient in drill and camp duties The guardsmen have become accustomed to the long "hikes" they take in the morning, and rather enjoy the

The Comptroller of the Treasury, Walter W. Warwick, said the question had not been referred to him for settlement, and that so far only one complaint had been received.

The fact that all the baggage of Troons C and D. SAN ANTONIO, Tex., July 20.-Not one soldier that I rubbed elbows with in all the armies of Europe in the past two years ever worried as some of these American soldiers along the edge of Mexico.

These Americans I refer to are worrying about their families back home; they don't know whether their wives and children have enough to eat. Such a deplorable situation could not possibly exist in any European army, for European governments care for the families of their soldiers.

The Mexican government doesn't; we don't. I've talked with hundreds of soldiers of six different armies in Europe. I talked today with my first soldier of the new American armies. If the Germans knew Britishers wer our part, only oversight, and the lesson we've learned has cost unhappiness and embarrassment in many American and embarrassment in many American homes.

If an American correspondent learned from a British soldier what I learned from Frank Shepkowski, my first American soldier today, he would break the censorship to get the story to the world.

Shepkowski, of Company H, Second Illinois Infantry, will march up the steps of his little home at 1452 Emma street, North Chicago, within a couple of days, give his wife a hug, and say "Well. I'm home."

He's got a check from Uncle Sam for $57.72 and if he's careful after paying his fare, he ought to have about $20 to hand over to Mrs. Shepkowski. He was born in Poland, but has served in the milita six years and his term of enlistment expired today, his militia career winding up with a blasing two weeks' holiday here in Texas.

Worry About Families.

Worry About Families. It was from Shepkowski that I got my first inkling that thousands of Americans here who were snatched suddenly from their families in the little breeze of war which atruck America three weeks ago, are worrying about folks back home and wondering whether folks back home and wondering whether they are getting food and other necessities of life:

"It wasn't so bad with me." said Shepkowsid, "because my wife was a dressmaker and I could quit my glove cutter's job and go to the front without-firer starving, but there are lots of fellows whose wives don't work and they're worried stiff."

There were thousands of tragedies as grim as many in Europe 'n American homes three weeks ago which are just coming to light here on the border. General Funston and bis staff officers are hearing them. Shepkowski put his finger on the greatest present fault with the American army plan.

"Can a man be a good soldier and do good work if he's wondering whether his family at home has enough to eat". I asked General Funston, after leaving the jitney and making my way to his hot office.

The general, whose perspiring head was leaving patches of dampness on the leather back of the huge chair in which he sat, leaned forward, saving earnestly:

"There are a thousand and one things an officer has to know these days," the captain said. "and what I have just shown you was only one. A declaration that this country is in favor of peaceful settlement of international disputes and disapproves the increase of armaments but it cannot disarm while other nations refuse to do so, and asking the President to call a conference of nations for disarmament after the war, was put into the naval bill in the Senate.

Senator Cummins of Iowa is the author of the plan. He declared that while he would vote for the bill, he did not want its passage taken as an announcement that the nation had abandoned its policy of peace.

Neither preparedness nor weakness would prevent war, said Senator Cummins. Nevertheless, he hoped progress could be made toward peace and disarmament.

Senator La Foliette assailed preparedness, and declared it a plot of special interests.

The Senate continued consideration of the bill this morning. Disappointed in not getting a vote yesterday, leaders hope for one this afternoon. The Fifth Maryland, with officers of the Thirtieth United States Infantry in command, was put through a great instruction exercise today. The Thirtieth Infantry officers are taking a great interest in the training of the national guardamen. They took out the First Maryland yesterday and put it through its paces.
